Call for papers – Special issue on

Standards and Solutions for eHealth Interoperability

European Journal for Biomedical Informatics (EJBI), an official journal of the European Federation for Medical Informatics (EFMI), seeks for papers for the special issue on Standards and Solutions for eHealth Interoperability. According to the internationally accepted definition, eHealth is not limited to healthcare, i.e. regulated care provider organizations, but includes also social services, wellbeing, lifestyle, and independent living enabled by AAL technologies. Using different standards or even proprietary specifications in Europe is an obstacle to the free dissemination of eHealth services and their cross-border deployment. The upcoming special issue for 2012 can provide further materials for interoperability of European health information systems and thus to accelerate the development of a European eHealth area.

The editors of the special issue are Bernd Blobel (Head, German eHealth Competence Center, University Hospital Regensburg, Germany; Chair, CEN/ISSS eHealth Standardisation Focus Group) and Robert Stegwee (Capgemini Consulting; Professor of eHealth at University of Twente, Chair of CEN TC 251 on Health Informatics).

Manuscripts should be prepared according to the Instructions for authors (<http://www.ejbi.eu/editorial/instructions.html>) and sent electronically to the e-mail address manuscripts@ejbi.org. We expect papers in the English version, which will be reviewed, and simultaneously the same manuscript translated in at least one other official European language.

Paper submission date: June 15th, 2012

About the European Journal for Biomedical Informatics (EJBI):

EJBI is an online, peer-reviewed journal reacting on the great European need to share information in the multilingual and multicultural European area. EJBI publishes papers in English and in other official European languages simultaneously. This opens new possibilities for faster transfer of scientific-research pieces of knowledge of many European countries to a large international community of biomedical researchers, physicians, other health personnel and citizens. Moreover, the journal enables to make results of scientific-research work and practical experiences of foreign specialists accessible to wider health public in a more comprehensible way in each European country.
